A LETTER from Bottineau, North Dakota says: For the last four years the grain crops in the north half of North Dakota have been a failure. And most of us must get out of this the best way we can. I went down to Winnipeg when Mr. Hamilton came home from your country to see what car and passenger rates the U. P. R. would give to Calgary. I think we will get about one fourth the ordinary rates. The great difficulty is for the poor people to get out of this country, as they are all more or less involved, and the Yankees are keeping a strict watch. When I came home the first instalment of five families started and got across the line all right but they were overhauled at the custom house and their stock was taken back by revenue. The trial will not come off until November 15th. The Yankees are determined to make a test case of three of them, and I am told they have secured the best legal talent to fight their case. You will notice this is the first case under the new treaty, and on what decision is arrived at by the courts much will depend. There never was a better class of men for pioneers than are here. They have worked like beavers and made this country like a garden, but drought and frost have done their work and though most of them were well fixed five years ago they are mostly poor now; but still they will have enough to start with. There will be twelve or fourteen families leave in a few days again and if the reports continue favorable as heretofore there will I think be over 150 families move from this country alone, and that is only a beginning.

Prince Albert Saskatchewan October 2: J. M. Campbell brought home the prize turnip of the Carrot River exhibition. It weighed 14 lbs. measured in girth round the largest part 29 1/2 inches and was in length 10 inches. We would like to know what country can beat this. No doubt such a turnip is quite large for Carrot river or Prince Albert but when it is compared with the products of agricultural regions it is simply insignificant. The largest turnip at the recent Edmonton exhibition girthed just 3 ft 8 inches and weighed only 36 1/2 lbs, and this is not much of a year for turnips either. It may be mentioned in passing that Dr. Craig of the Sturgeon has 14 acres of turnips, sown broadcast, which good judges estimate will yield 14,000 bushels. But then Edmonton is a farming country.

R. J. Moffat of Aspen, Colorado, writes to Geo. S. Long of Sturgeon river settlement asking as to the suitability of the Edmonton district for the growth of small fruits and the best route to Calgary. The strawberry and black and red currant flourish exceedingly here in a wild state, and there are besides the blue berry, high and low bush cranberry, Saskatoon or June berry and choke cherry are still more abundant. Of course in a newly settled country such as this very little attention has been paid to fruit cultivation, as yet. Red currants of cultivated variety are a thoroughly established success. Black currants, strawberries, raspberries and gooseberries have also generally succeeded when tried. There is no doubt that their culture can be made a perfect success, but the fact has not yet been established by continued experiments on a large scale. The best route to reach Calgary is by way of Winnipeg. The railway will be completed to Edmonton by July of next year. It is impossible to guarantee success to any man in any line of life or in any place, as success depends as much upon the man as upon his surroundings.

EDMONTON, BULLETIN, OCT. 25, 1890.

IMMIGRATION FROM DAKOTA.

The number of letters of enquiry which are being continually received in this and other parts of the Northwest from persons resident in Dakota and other Northwestern States is so large and they are of such a nature as to be of national interest. These letters tell more than the words which they contain. They tell of thousands of Canadian settlers in all parts of these Northwestern States—men of energy, of industry and of enterprise—who having accepted the misrepresentations of the railroad companies and land agents of these states as gospel, and risked their all on their truth, find that they have settled in a region of which the climatic conditions are so unfavorable, that energy, industry and enterprise count for nothing and that they themselves are in many cases reduced to beggary, with absolute starvation but few removals away. Unless they make up their minds to simply starve these people must move somewhere, and it would seem that as many as have heard of favorable accounts of the Northwest are turning their attention in this direction. Even those who have been less unfortunate are as heartily sick of the political, municipal and social relations existing in the States as they are of the material failures which have been their lot while there. To put the matter shortly: There is, owing to a combination of circumstances, a most excellent opportunity to relieve to a great extent the losses from the agricultural exodus of the past ten years, by getting the men who have gone out back, with no doubt a fair sprinkling of their fellow settlers of other nationalities. While the unfortunates of these Western States are—in the case of the Canadians at least—poorer than when they went there, and frequently abjectly poor; they are rich in experience of the kind that is of the most value to the Northwestern settler and of the kind that under the favorable conditions ordinarily prevailing here can be turned into actual cash in a very few years. Barring their poverty—and this exists rather by comparison than in fact—they are by long odds and in every way the most desirable class of settlers that this country can secure; there are thousands of them, and the question is: What is being done by any one to place the attractions of this country properly and systematically before them and assist their removal hither. It is a general complaint that the efforts of all the several immigration agencies of the federal government in the British islands and on the continent of Europe, of the C. P. R. company on both sides of the Atlantic, and of the Manitoba government in the eastern provinces have had very poor results during the past few years. The total arrivals this year from these fields falls below that of last year, notwithstanding the continued efforts that have been made. Would it not then be sound policy to expend at least a part of the effort that is now being wasted in attempting to induce European immigration in aiding the movement that has already assumed such large proportions in Dakota. Possibly something is being done. The C. P. R. is certainly doing a little but as far as known the Canadian government is doing practically nothing. That there is plenty of room for the government to work, and that there is great need of its doing something the contents of a letter published elsewhere in this issue prove. Under the extended extradition treaty the Canadian custom houses instead of being of assistance to immigrants coming in are made to assist in keeping them from settling across the line and in subjecting them to all the annoyance and delay that the longevity of the most unscrupulous land sharks in the world can devise. It may not be out of place to suggest to representing the goods of emigrants, but where the customs department of America looks itself to that extent to the interests of the United States, it is as little as could be expected of the government that all care should be taken that assistance should only be given in cases which the terms of the treaty required, and that proceedings taken mere for purposes of delay or to cause vexation should be thwarted. When the solvent man is just as liable to vexation, delay and loss as the insolvent, it is the imperative duty of the government to step in and protect its own interests by protecting those of its prospective citizens.
